The English language, it is said at the present time, is a language of the future. It is in power and beauty, and vastly superior to many in versatility and extent. It is a language whose literature has exerted a great influence over the human mind. Wherever this language is spoken, there men look for a higher type of civilization and not in vain. Steadily gaining ground as it is, it seems destined to be, at no distant day, the universal language of the world.

The case of William Harvey of this city, against the Grand Trunk railroad company, is on trial in the circuit court here, Judge Fox presiding. Mr. Harvey brings two actions against the company, as follows:

First. 71 car loads of railroad ties from Warwick, Canada to Portland. No special agreement as to the rate. On arrival at Portland, the company refused to receive the ties, and asked what he should do with them, that they were too pretty to kill. Lee replied that he must shoot them; that one, and Lee threw the other down and cut her throat. The policy of Lee was to spare none who were old enough to understand the difference between right and wrong. The Turkish army is more concerned with the matter than these things, stated that he related them to Brigham Young soon after they took place.

After nineteen years, the cruel fate of the emigrant train, in all its terrible details, has been made public, and the chief criminal is likely to receive his long deferred punishment.

THE BANGOR AND CALAIS SHORE RAILROAD. A full meeting of the Directors of the Bangor and Calais Shore Line Railroad was held at Bangor on the 19th inst. J. C. Talbot, president, Ignatius Sargent was chosen Treasurer, and he was voted to take measures for prosecuting the enterprise without delay. The gauge was ordered to be made 3 feet six inches, and the order making Buckport the western terminus was voted. The Board were deeply interested. The communities along the line have voted liberal aid and the work of locating the line will be immediately begun by L. L. Buckland, Chief Engineer. This is an enterprise in which Bangor feels a deep and practical interest.

The extension of the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company's lines will be completed to Portland this week. This company is the only rival of the Western Union, and it is expected that an important reduction in rates will take place before long. The high tariff of the Western Union Company is an extortion, and the rivalry between the two lines will result in good to the public.

Rev. Zeas Thompson of Mechanic Falls and his excellent wife, will celebrate their golden wedding on Saturday of this week. Friends will be invited to a dinner at 11 A. M. and a reception at 2 P. M. The venerable couple will not lack for visitors, for they have warm friends in all parts of the State.

KENNEBEC COUNTY ITEMS. Revised plans for the new gymnasium of Colby University have been received from the architect, and the building is being erected. The plans are for a building of brick and iron, and it is to be of brick and iron—Henry Taber of Vassalboro, met with a serious accident on Monday last. In turning his horse and carriage, the horse became unmanageable and threw him to the ground, breaking his collar bone. The horse was killed and the carriage was damaged. The accident occurred at Colby University, where he was standing at the Colby University.

The story of the massacre which the world was long a mystery, is quite familiar to all readers. In 1857 a party of emigrants numbering 137 men, women and children, while on their way from Arkansas to California, were waylaid at a place called Mountain Meadow, which is situated on the rim of the Great Basin in the south-western part of Utah territory and about ninety-three miles from Beaver where the trial took place, and massacred, none escaping to tell the fate of their companions. Their fate was long enveloped in mystery, and when enquiries were made by the United States Army, they were deceived by the Mormons, who were said to have been slaughtered by the Indians. There was considerable money in the hands of the emigrants and a large herd of nice cattle which excited the cupidity of the Mormons, and led to the bloody deed.

The place where the massacre occurred was a wagon trail, a strip of meadow, and a small stream, and the scene was a view of half a mile down the canon, and in turn was commanded from the hills on every other side. There was a train had determined to remain for a week or ten days to allow their teams to recruit on the rich grass which grew in the meadow, and the Mormons were said to have been slaughtered by the Indians. There was considerable money in the hands of the emigrants and a large herd of nice cattle which excited the cupidity of the Mormons, and led to the bloody deed.

The plans are for a building of brick and iron, and it is to be of brick and iron—Henry Taber of Vassalboro, met with a serious accident on Monday last. In turning his horse and carriage, the horse became unmanageable and threw him to the ground, breaking his collar bone. The horse was killed and the carriage was damaged. The accident occurred at Colby University, where he was standing at the Colby University.

The story of the massacre which the world was long a mystery, is quite familiar to all readers. In 1857 a party of emigrants numbering 137 men, women and children, while on their way from Arkansas to California, were waylaid at a place called Mountain Meadow, which is situated on the rim of the Great Basin in the south-western part of Utah territory and about ninety-three miles from Beaver where the trial took place, and massacred, none escaping to tell the fate of their companions. Their fate was long enveloped in mystery, and when enquiries were made by the United States Army, they were deceived by the Mormons, who were said to have been slaughtered by the Indians. There was considerable money in the hands of the emigrants and a large herd of nice cattle which excited the cupidity of the Mormons, and led to the bloody deed.

The place where the massacre occurred was a wagon trail, a strip of meadow, and a small stream, and the scene was a view of half a mile down the canon, and in turn was commanded from the hills on every other side. There was a train had determined to remain for a week or ten days to allow their teams to recruit on the rich grass which grew in the meadow, and the Mormons were said to have been slaughtered by the Indians. There was considerable money in the hands of the emigrants and a large herd of nice cattle which excited the cupidity of the Mormons, and led to the bloody deed.
